cucamonga clothing exchange business profile: 12 Unique Ways to Make Money with Secondhand Clothing Jeff Napier, 2017-04-13 ealing with secondhand clothing is rewarding in many ways. First, you are treading a light footprint on the earth. You are eliminating the need for the manufacturing and transportation of new clothing, with its attendant energy waste and pollution. This also eliminates the waste of disposing of clothes that still have life left in them. The other side of the coin is that you are helping people who couldn't otherwise afford to put themselves and their children in good clothes, and dress fashionably. Most of these business ideas can be started with little or no money, time or experience. Some are great partnership opportunities, so you can get your friends, your family, your church or group involved in the fun and profit. The profit can be what you want. You can just dabble, making some rainy day money, or build a business into a clothing empire. These are not get-rich-quick schemes. They are get-rich-slow schemes. Just to give you an example, one business I started was a clothing exchange, which I'll explain in full detail later in this book. I made a profit while giving away free clothing. I was especially happy when low-income parents came in and got literally boxes of clothing for all their children and themselves, and didn't have to pay a cent. I remember one woman drove up in a beat-up 1970s station wagon with a broken exhaust system, and running on 7 of its 8 cylinders. She and her four children came in, and picked out their own full wardrobes. They left without having to pay one cent, which I doubt they had anyway. That month, and every month, I gave away $44,000 in free clothing, and made $5,000 for myself in the process. I only ran the business for four months because I'm a business writer, not a 'clothing exchange guy,' but I did have fun while the experiment lasted. There is room for at least one free clothing exchange in every community in the world. If that doesn't float your boat, read on, because I'll talk about all sorts of creative ideas from custom tailoring to eBay sales. You may want to read the book in sequence, even if some of these ideas aren't for you, because in each section, you will find many useful and effective business tips you can use in whatever business you take up. You may want to use these ideas directly, or use bits and pieces in a business of your own invention. Have fun & prosper! - Jeff Napier
