Types of Medical School Interviews

Traditional Interviews

Traditional interviews generally consist of one-on-one or panel interviews where applicants respond to questions about their background, motivation for medicine, ethical scenarios, and interpersonal skills. These interviews often last between 30 and 60 minutes and focus on assessing communication abilities and personal attributes.

Multiple Mini Interviews (MMIs)

MMIs have become increasingly popular among medical schools for their ability to evaluate a broad range of skills in a structured manner. This format involves a series of short, timed stations where candidates respond to various scenarios or questions. Each station assesses different competencies such as ethical reasoning, teamwork, empathy, and problem-solving. MMIs require quick thinking and adaptability, making them distinct from the traditional interview style.

Group and Panel Interviews

medical school interview invites 2023 2024: On Sex and Gender Doriane Lambelet

Coleman, 2024-05-21 An eye-opening account about what we get wrong on sex and gender—and how we can be both sex smart and thoughtful. "Doriane Coleman presents a serious blueprint for common ground on matters of sex and gender, bringing compassion and intelligence to one of our most difficult cultural collisions." —Guy-Uriel Charles, Harvard Law School On Sex and Gender focuses on three sequential and consequential questions: What is sex as opposed to gender? How does sex matter in our everyday lives? And how should it be reflected in law and policy? All three have been front-and-center in American life and politics since the rise of the trans right movement: They are included in both major parties' political platforms. They are the subject of ongoing litigation in the federal courts and of highly contentious legislation on Capitol Hill. And they are a pivotal issue in the culture wars between left and right playing out around the dinner tables, on campuses and school boards, on op-ed pages, and in corporate handbooks. Doriane Coleman challenges both sides to chart a better way. In a book that is equal parts scientific explanation, historical examination, and personal reflection, she argues that denying biological sex and focusing only on gender would have detrimental effects on women's equal opportunity, on men's future prospects, and on the health and welfare of society. Structural sexism needed to be dismantled—a true achievement of feminism and an ongoing fight—but going forward we should be sex smart, not sex blind. This “seminal book—the science, the law, the politics all explained so clearly” (Edwin Moses, two-time Olympic gold medalist) is a clear guide for reasonable Americans on sex and gender—something everyone wants to understand but is terrified to discuss. Coleman shows that the science is settled, but equally there is a middle ground where common sense reigns and we can support transgender people without denying the facts of human biology. She livens her narrative with a sequence of portraits of exceptional human beings from legal pioneers like Myra Bradwell and Ketanji Brown Jackson to champion athletes like Caster Semenya and Cate Campbell to civil rights giants like Ruth Bader Ginsburg and Pauli Murray. Above all, Coleman reminds us that sex not only exists, but is also good—and she shows how we can get both sex and gender right for society.

Initially, I felt really scattered and unsure how to respond in the best way. Fortunately, Jay helped me develop a strategy to structure and polish my responses and represent my best self. His approach made me stand out more than my peers. SS, University of Calgary, School of Medicine Before working with Jay, I was completely lost on how to approach the multiple mini interview. But after working with Jay, I felt 10x more confident and could organize my thoughts and deliver strong responses to many questions. He showed me the importance of personal qualities and taught me how to showcase my strengths using personal stories. I am so excited to start medical school in the fall of 2018 all thanks to his guidance. I could not have been this successful without him!
